ESA's Brief Summary

The Economics Students' Association (ESA) is the course union and social hub for all students who study economics at UPRM. Our mission is to create a community of students' cross-cutting all disciplines, bound together by their common interest in economics.

Can I join ESA if I'm not an Economics Major?

Of course! While we're officially a course union for economics students, many of our members come from all walks of College. As long as you share a passion for economics and/or a love for free food and learning new things, we'll get along just fine. There are no barriers for entry and everybody is welcomed!

Our Mission and Vision:

Mission

Our mission is to foster a positive and enthusiastic community for all undergraduate students studying Economics at the University of Puerto Rico, Mayaguez Campus. Through events, members, and a dedicated executive, the group aims to build a community of students, faculty, and alumni—alike in their interest of economics, and proud of their field of study. Central to this endeavor is the critical focus on student creativity, connectivity, and relationships with faculty and industry professionals. We aim to make economics a more pluralistic science and develop economic ideas to better serve humanity. ESA believes in the power of a true community, and is dedicated to fulfilling the limitless potential of the student body.

Vision

Our vision is to strengthen the sense of community and develop connections amongst UPRM students. We aim to improve the exchange of ideas, communication and confraternization of the students on ESA and those of other collaborating associations. We wish to strengthen the relations amongst students and faculty. Also, to further enrich the common knowledge in the science of economics of our university's community. As well as to foster those who have an interest in economics to acquire more knowledge by providing them a platform for the free exchange of ideas.
